Key Concepts in Race and Ethnicity

Nasar Meer University of Strathclyde

'A concise, profound, and beautifully written book that offers a tour de force across the landscape of race and ethnicity.'

- Per Mouritsen, Aarhus University

'A conceptually power-packed volume that is at once erudite and accessible... Scholars and students will be served very well by this absorbing, far-reaching enquiry into ethnicity and race.'

- Raymond Taras, Tulane University

'An excellent book both for those who are new to the study of race and ethnicity and for established scholars. It will no doubt be the text of choice on many courses and by many students.' - Tariq Modood, University of Bristol

'Meer's account is a must for all students who are interested in deepening their understanding and it will become an important point of reference.'

- John Solomos, University of Warwick

This book offers an accessible discussion of both foundational and novel concepts in the study of race and ethnicity. Each account will help readers become familiar with how long standing and contemporary arguments within race and ethnicity studies contribute to our understanding of social and political life more broadly.
